The Faculty of Architecture was founded in 2012 as the most recent embodiment of a century-old tradition of excellence in architectural education at the Sint-Lucas School of Architecture. The uniqueness of the programmes taught at Campus Sint-Lucas Ghent and Campus Sint-Lucas Brussels stems from the integration and interaction of design studios and technical, theoretical and explorative artistic courses and research.

Study Programmes

The faculty offers the following programmes:

Bachelor’s programmes (in Dutch)
- Bachelor of Architecture
- Bachelor of Interior Architecture

Master’s programmes
- Master of Architecture
- Master of Interior Architecture*
- Master of Urban Design and Spatial Planning*

Continuing education:
- Module Spatial project management
- Module Management of an architect’s firm

* Only in Dutch

Interaction between the different programmes is stimulated through shared reviews, exhibitions, seminars, workshops, excursions, etc.

In the Faculty of Architecture, the design process – and particularly its social and cultural role – is the core of the education. It also defines the trajectory of graduates’ later practice or research career.

The teaching staff at the Sint-Lucas campuses include many leading international architects and researchers, all of whom bring extensive experience in the field of Interior Architecture, Architecture and Urban Design and Strategic Planning to the classroom and design studio.
Locations

Situated in the heart of Europe, Brussels and Ghent are two culturally vibrant and diverse international university cities. Both cities are centrally located and are easily accessible from anywhere in Europe or beyond. Both Ghent, the historic heart of Flanders, and Brussels, the capital of Europe, provide students with a particularly invigorating environment, combining the most diverse aspects of architecture with unexpected cultural opportunities to widen one’s own frame of reference. Brussels and Ghent are simultaneously historical cities and dynamic, modern architectural and cultural centres, offering a full-option architectural, social and historical landscape. The Sint-Lucas campuses are well-equipped base points to further develop and engage the contemporary discourse on architecture from multiple critical vantage points.

International Orientation

Several programmes of the Faculty of Architecture were awarded a ‘strong international orientation’ recommendation by the NVAO (Dutch-Flemish Accreditation Organisation). They are the first and currently the only architecture programmes in Flanders and the Netherlands to receive this distinction. In awarding the commendation, the NVAO acknowledges the structural incorporation and thematic depth of the international dimension of our curriculum.

The Faculty of Architecture takes its international dimension as the basis for its own quality assessment. The faculty’s international activities are extensive and diversified and include student mobility and staff exchange on a European and intercontinental level, internationally oriented programmes for incoming students, international workshops and competitions, international research projects, international internships, development cooperation, etc. The faculty works hard to consolidate and enrich its network of architecture professionals and researchers. This network spans Europe, Australia, the United States, Latin America, Africa and Asia. Students are granted special access to this international forum.
